Welcome to the multidisciplinary autoimmune disease genetics resource, Autoimmunity.org, led by the Autoimmunity Research Group at the University of British Columbia. The “Mother” of Autoimmunity.org was created in 1988, when Dr. Charles Sabatino of the University of Washington (UW) Immunology Department examined a small number of families known to have multiple cases of autoimmunity and found that the disease in these families appeared to be inherited as a simple Mendelian trait. From this humble beginning, the Autoimmunity Research Group has become the world’s preeminent autoimmune disease genetics resource. The mission of the Autoimmunity Research Group is to advance our understanding of the natural history, genetics and treatment of autoimmune diseases. Autoimmunity.org has received more than 7.2 million hits since we launched in 1996 and has been featured in the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, in Reader’s Digest and PBS. We have developed a network of resources, including our well-curated list of articles on autoimmunity, a regularly updated full-text version of our “Autoimmunity Journal,” our free searchable database of thousands of publications on autoimmunity, a drug finder (1,675 drugs in 2018, with an annual update), and a gene finder with over 14,000 autosomal markers. We have also developed a worldwide network of collaborators and collaborators. We collaborate with researchers across the globe to add depth and breadth to our research, with a focus on inter-disciplinary and population-based research. For instance, our collaboration with the British Genetics of Multiple Sclerosis Consortium led to the publication of one of the largest genetic studies in the world on multiple sclerosis. (Genome-Wide Search for New Genes in Multiple Sclerosis, PLoS ONE, July, 2016). We have also collaborated with the UK to establish the largest collection of monozygotic twins with autoimmune disease in the world; where 100 monozygotic twins and 150 dizygotic
