Q: Cannot add new instance of object I'm trying to create a new instance of an object and then calling a variable from that object in a different script. object 'object' And then when I try to add a new instance I get "The type or namespace name 'object' could not be found". A: This is because you are working in the default script context, in which type name scoping is based on how the file is written. You will have to explicitly state the context where you want to use it. I'd recommend using the Player directly, but if you want to use script context then public class ScriptContextHolder { private static ScriptContext context = null; public static void SetContext(ScriptContext context) { ScriptContextHolder.context = context; } } To be used as: public class GVMain : MonoBehaviour { public GameObject object; void Update() { // test context ScriptContextHolder.SetContext(gameObject.context); } } To be used as: public class GVMain : MonoBehaviour { public GameObject object; void Update() { // test context object.context.something =... // test context object.context.something =... } } This can then be used to access the value of something from the object in the context of the GameObject.
