In a recent interview, Peter Bell, founder and CEO of Motion Logic Games, commented on the current state of the video games market, which has been steadily declining for a few years now. Bell believes this is mostly due to the launch of the Wii and the popularity of the Kinect, though the potential for new markets has been a major factor as well. Asked what he thought was the reason for the state of the video game market, he said: "It's really hard to give a single reason. We don't know. People buy games just because it's fun, because they see an advert or they click on an advertisement. It's really hard to say one reason for the drop off in sales and it could be a combination of everything. "I think, from the publisher's point of view, there is a correlation with the Wii and the Kinect. The Wii is driving people away from games, especially with all of the popular IPs that have come out over the last two or three years. There are not many AAA titles with great franchises on the Wii. The Kinect is pretty good, but I think people can play with their own hands and we've had a generation of people who are willing to play games without a controller. "I would say it's a combination of everything. When the right title that will bring a console back on course." Q: Limit of a Taylor series in polar coordinates Is it true everyone has these consoles and they are actually supported by good quality games. It could be the right title that will bring a console back on course. Q: Limit of a Taylor series in polar coordinates Is it true that, given the non-negative integers $0 \leq n, n+1 \leq m$ and a function f continuous on the closed unit disk in \mathbb{C} , then $\lim_{r \rightarrow 1^-} \sum_{n=0}^m \frac{r^{n+1}}{n!} \int_0^{2\pi} f(re^{i\theta}) e^{in\theta} d\theta = \int_0^{2\pi} f(re^{i\theta}) e^{in\theta} d\theta$
